In view however of the history of the present regime there is no certainty that this cab-Binning inet will outlive the coming session of the Lagislature, and it is this which creates and justifies rubblic dissatisfaction. The present administration has the confidence of the nation and the public welfare demands stability in government. It is true that the well-besional act of unwise government than fre-quent changes in the Ministry. Our present prosperity exists in spite of the damaging frepursely of governmental changes. Property bolders and all intelligent persons saw no country. But if any one supnature that so much of our kindly actions in poses that this is sufficient to allay the feeling that has been aroused or that, as suggested by the Advertisor, a disclaimer in His Majesty's next legislative address will accomwill continue until there is an end of the petty intriguing, undue influences to get favorites elected, serving out gin and other spirituous liquors to natives and other publ acts in defiance of law. It is not correct to suppose that all those, and many other things which are going on, are not criticised in the newspapers because the law prevents such citicism, under the full guarantee which the Constitution gives for liberty of speech and of the Press. We venture to suggest that there is another reason for such allence and that is, to say it plainly, a feeling of pride side world that such a state of things should

We are of the opinion, that unless a highe standard of obedience to law is held up for public example, it will soon become incossi ble to find any responsible persons fit to be trusted with the administration. And it is precisely that result which enomies of Hawaiian independence would gladly see.

In the life of a nation as well as of a man, each successive period brings its peculiar temptation and test of character and capacity. Such a test is approaching this kingdom, and one rare in the experience of other States; this is the fact of an extraordinary surplas in the Treasury, awaiting formal appropriation by the Legislature. An overplus of funds is not one of the least serious, if the least feared, of the dangers an individual or a Government may have to meet. It furnishes one of the severest tests of discretion and self-The fool finding his peckets full, control. goes for his fling. How many greedy eyes are upon it? How many hands of foolishness and waste villainy are stretching out to clutch from for others. Sharp economy may groun at their | it? No thinking man can contemplate without apprehension the responsibility placed in the hands of any set of men in whose discretion and principles there may be any lack of confi-

The fear is not merely that these funds may crowded the Hawalian from the possession of his free-hold. It is not merely that in the appropriations made, some important interests may be neglected, while needless and absurd expenditure may be made in other directions. The evil most to be apprehended and guarded against is that of a habit of extravagance which is likely to be begotten and fostered. This has been a frugal Government. Our means have been narrow, and they have been cautionsly and economically expended. There is now danger of relaxing economy, and of setting up a liabit of lavishness. It is the beginning of financial and generally of moral ruin in an individual and in a state when one abundons carefulness in expenditure, however abundant one's funds may happen to be. The incline of descent is easy and rapid to ultimate bankrupter. It is always easy to expand one's style of living and to multiply expenses, even with carefulness. It is exceedingly hard to again contract expenses. Salaries of officials once raised are hard to reduce. Multiplied public services are not easily diminished. Revenue falls off, while expenses go on, and either fresh and injurious taxation must be imposed, or embarissing loans ob- vent it from splitting whereby the tarmed much disfigured. It is difficult to say precisely what particular public views are represented by the Honohow the ingenious minds which have framed this immense scheme propose to carry out the trifling detail of repaying the loan. Whatever may be the attraction of the loan idea as a cry, it need not be regarded as a matter which will very scriously incommode the actual deliberations of the Assembly, for the question where the money is to come from will probably form a not unimportant consideration if the loan idea be ever seriously brought up.

Macron - Prof. Earnbook closed his season at Suffram's Hall last Saturday evening to a crowded house. The matimes on Saturday afternoon was a decided sacross, and our little folks availed themselves of the opportunity of witnessing the Professor's wonderful tracks, and their astonishment knew no bounds. A warren in Nature says the scorpion commits suicide. When put within a circle of glowing charcoal embers, after vain attempts to escape, the scotpton raises his tail above his body, pierces the exception raises his tail assive as toxiy, pierces his boad with his sting and dies. Another writer says that this is an impressibility, for owing to the position and mainre of its weapon the animal can-not strike itself. It does not protrude a sting like the bees, and the line of strike is downwards and backwards, with a interal and yet downward mo-tion. As the Rible accurately describes it, it is a strike not a sting-

The increasing frequency of furnishing liquor to natives deserves the sternest censure. Saving to natives deserves the stermest censure. Saying mothing about the morality of the business—it is contrary to law, and the law should be enforced. The condition of a certain military company list Thursday, after a dress purade and a lunch was disgraceful. A violation of the law is bad enough, but such a violation in the presence of the Supreme Executive was worse and verily an insult to the King. It is often said, and is probably true, that the execution of the laws reflects the character of hose whose duty it is to execute them. This is true with reference to the liquor law.

THE most noticeable feature on Accession Day. next to the closing of the stores, was the discrace next to the closing of the stores, was the disgrace-ful drunkenness of the military. Many of them were mere boys, and apparently not accustomed to the use of intoxicating drinks. The greater is the wrong done by the violation of law in furnishing them hignor. A court-martial ought to be hold at once and the edicader summarily punished by martial law. The military ought to be under as strict discipline as the police, and for them drunk-enness should be the unpurdonable sin. A single instance of intoxication should be the occasion for instantaneous discharge from the military serice. instantaneous discharge from the military sevice, as it is from Marshal Parke's police force.

TIME TABLE Ar the innetion of the Waislus road in Ewa the other day we met about 200 natives on horseback It was a strange sight in that district where one generally meets two Chinamen on the road to one native, and where large gatherings are very rare. These horsemen many of whom were gaily dressed, were crowding together and gesticulating furiousir. They were preparing to run horses, and every one of them was betting his bottom dollar. Two matter of trimming trees has been agitated considerably of late, and a word on the method of the trimined so high as to permit a free circulation of air underneath and that the sun-light may have free access to the ground. The trimining of the trees in the vard of J. H. Coney, Esq., is a good example of this method. There are trees all over town and many places which would be benefitted by such a wholesule trimming. It is observable also, that many trimmers do not seem to know, that a branch of any size should first be cut port way through on the lower side, which will pre-
